Dear Ms. McKendry,

I am aware of the allegations against Dr. Akbar Khan as well as the fact that the College of Physicians and Surgeons is considering to impose interim terms and conditions upon Dr. Khan's medical license and I am providing this letter to support him.

My husband and I came to reach the end of the line with conventional oncology treatments and pursued Dr. Khan after doing our own research after experiencing the current medical system as it stands. I received conventional chemotherapy treatments from a well respected top oncologist at one of the recognized top cancer hospitals in Toronto for twelve years and felt that it was time that I took charge of my own health!

Having been a patient of Dr. Khan for five years I have received the utmost care. Dr. Khan has been very professional and transparent at all times.

Dr. Khan E-Mails me all the results from my bloodwork and CT Scans in a timely fashion.

The environment when having chemo is most relaxing and very private.

"SEF" Chemo, DCA and DSMO were used to treat my sixteen year battle with lymphoma and I can't imagine what this would do to me emotionally, physically and psychologically if his Medicor Cancer Centre were not permitted to operate. It has kept me in remission these past few years.

It is important for patients like myself and others to be able to make autonomous choices about our own medical treatments.

By preventing Dr. Khan to offer these treatments, the College would be interfering with my own autonomy, as his treatments are NOT available anywhere else in Canada, to the best of my knowledge and research. Putting terms and conditions on his license would effectively prevent me from receiving the treatments that I have chosen and I don't feel the College should dictate how I should foster my health.

I have had time to research other opportunities for treatment and chose Dr. Khan and his Medicor Cancer Centre, as it gives me a greater sense of hope and peace.

The thought of NOT having a choice of treatment is a deeply concerning prospect, one that I would prefer to not even consider at this stage of my life and the health challenges that lie ahead!

For the College of Physicians and Surgeons to not allow the Medicor Cancer Centre to operate would indeed be a crime!

Yours truly,

Subject: from William Hurt about Dr. Akbar Khan

To: JMCKENDRY@MCCARTHY.CA

Dear Jennifer,

My name is William Hurt.

I'm an American film and theatre actor with a long list of credits that are pretty well known.

This is rushed, I'm sorry to say, but I wanted to register a few words by email before you "close up shop" there in Toronto, this evening, if you haven't, already.

Let me say a few things to the College of Medicine about Dr. Akbar Khan.

To Whom It May Concern (the College),

My name is William Hurt.

I am an American actor who has had blessed fortune in my career.

I also have a Grade IV D2 Bone Mets cancer.

Dr. Akbar Khan and I met six months ago when I first arrived in Ontario to work on a TV series for the duration of summer and early fall.

I'd heard of him, before. He was highly spoken of in naturopathic circles.

I have a serious cancer that was treated initially, of course, in the allopathic models; and they undoubtedly saved my life. No question.

I am forever grateful to the simply amazing people who kept me afloat.

Afterwards, with the extra time on earth those magicians had bought me, I tried to build up my health and headed with their blessing, toward the "alternative" methods.

One of my initial heroes, a peerless surgeon at Norris Cancer Center, Dr. Inderbir Gill, spoke well of that route as did my other renowned radiologist, Dr. Michael Zelevsky, at MSK in NYC, after he oversaw my radiation. Their recommendations on how to enhance life were the first that led me to many adventures in better living. It's been a great revelation. I'm grateful to them for the time they've given me and for their suggestions to obey my instincts in exploring the best that my time in this life has so far had to offer.

They also firmly supported my spiritual commitment. All of them have done that. It is perhaps my greatest gift from them, all.

In looking for alternative ideas I ran into many possibilities. One, for instance, was DCA which I'd heard about from a bio-chemist in Seattle. I tried it, early, but went another way. I made radical changes in diet and added natural supplements.

Another idea was LDN that came, first, from an MD/ND, Dr. Karima Hirani, in LA. Another was GcMAF from that same doctor. I was already working with high dose Vit C, glutathione and amino acids initially administered by a doctor who had previously been head of Residents at Columbia Presbyterian in NYC, starting right after the radiation. There have been many and I know they've helped.

My attention was drawn to Dr. Khan even from Stateside.

There were a number of people who had mentioned him and I'd looked up his facility before arriving in Toronto. So, right away, I looked him up.

We have been working very successfully since last April with a number of protocols, including, most specifically, DMSO, started recently.

I immediately loved his clinic. It was clearly of highest level, professionally; was a relaxed atmosphere while also entirely focused and organized.

Dr. Khan is more than informed, utterly fluent, freely communicative, amicable, straightforward, efficient, honest yet bolstering, all in one.

His lovely wife, co-workers and assistants are much more than helpful. Not only was it business at the highest level of proficiency but at the same time friendly and completely positive.

Spacious atmosphere, private, open hearted. His environment is simply a great place to be and to heal.

Sometimes, the PSA, in my situation, starts nudging.

Just in case it decided to take off on me, again, it was time for me to start thinking about the idea of some chemo.

That's when SEF ("safe") chemo came up as a possibility. A route to research.

I was introduced to the principles of those treatment protocols and, then, to people who had been actually experiencing it.

One lady, in particular, impressed me. She flies in from Montreal accompanied by her daughter.

She'd experienced two rounds of full-on chemo at earlier stages of her disease. They had been miserable experiences for her. But the person before me was a person in bloom. Her hair was full, her color great, her mind pert, her humor intact. I asked if that had been her experience, before. She just looked at my like, "are you kidding?" Her daughter first answered for her, "oh, no. No, no, no. It was very, very different." And they described to me the difficulties she'd experienced in the other rounds. Anyone versed in the world of the Emperor or Maladies knows what she described.

She recommended SEF Chemo ... without reservation.

I have had my life saved from the brink by established skills and, since those hellish days, been helped immensely, also, by "non-traditional" therapy.

There is no question that my health, energy levels, mental focus and ability to continue to work in my profession at the highest caliber have not suffered because of the life-saving acts received in the early stages and, since then, the "alternative" (a rather regrettable word for many proven protocols) supports.

My pain levels have been minimal or non-existent for five years, my PSA has remained far lower than most expected would be the case.

There is no question that surgery, initial hormonal treatment and radiation stopped the raging fires of my particular dose of this cancer. But there is also no doubt that the other actions taken have kept me living at a vibrant and capable level.

If the "blood numbers" eventually creep into a more troubling zone I would not hesitate for a second to undergo SEF "safe" Chemo either with the wonderful Dr. Khan, how has my trust, or its brilliant inventor, Dr. Matsumura.

The gentle lady from Montreal who spoke with me after being well into her chemo schedule said it had reduced her comparative difficulties from the original experiences by 90%. Her thick head of hair and roses in her cheeks proved her point.

I believe that all doctors are helpers, all are healers, all mean well.

And I am living proof that both modalities serve us, the sick.

They do not contradict each other.

The “alternative” medical model, with fine practitioners like Dr. Khan and Dr. Matsumura, needs to be de-marginalized, deserves to be brought in from the cold.

It really does help. There are inventions within it that can help save so many.

I have put in a call to Senator McCain and if I can get through to that busy man will be recommending it to him.

I am proof that the alternative, naturopathic medical world helps immensely.

With utmost respect,

William Hurt
